

FOREIGN MANUFACTURES.

Mr. Alexander Garvie of Leigh, Scotland, thus expressed himself to a representative of the San Francisco Chronicle.

On the Steamer I was on crossing the Atlantic was the owner of the largest tannery in Glasgow, perhaps in Great Britain. He was coming to America to establish a branch factory to tan the leather required for his export trade in this country. The worst part of it was that he would be forced to employ American workmen, because some contract labor law they have here would not permit him to bring his own experienced men from Scotland. He said there was no way for him to get around building a factory in America, for he could not possibly pay the outrageous tariff and sell his goods here in competition with the goods made in the United States. Many other manufacturers have determined to build branch factories here for the same reason. To my knowledge there are several in Glasgow and more in other towns, and besides, of course, there are great many I do not know anything about. One other man on the steamer was a lace manufacturer at Nottingham. His name was Campbell. He was coming here to begin manufacturing the kinds of laces that the tariff prevented his shipping into this country from England. In my line, of course, the tariff makes no difference. We do not ship tea here.

The growing popularity of the new tariff is convincing the foreigners that the triumph of lying last November was a snap judgment, and that the people will never consent the repeal of that beneficent measure. The stream of foreign manufacturers which was checked by the election of a Democratic House of Representatives has again set in and blessings abound on every hand under our McKinley Tariff.

Newlands's "If"

After entertaining the Irrigation Convention yesterday with a flow of soul on that important matter to the State of Nevada, F. Newlands was asked by General Clarke a pertinent question, as follows:

General Clarke—I understand from what you say that you have secured in private ownership the principal storage sites on the Carson and Truckee rivers. Will you undertake to deed to the Commissioners of the water districts, in trust for the people, the deed to be deposited in escrow until payment is made to you for the first cost, at six per cent. per annum?

Mr. Newlands—I will, if the matter is accomplished in reasonable time.

The above is from the Chronicle and while it does not say much, conveys a disparaging idea of Mr. Newlands and his irrigation scheme.

The APPEAL never yet knew of a man who invested money in trying to improve Nevada, who was not eluded by nearly everybody.

Adolph Sutro never had an enemy in Nevada until he attempted to spend money here in improvements. Mr. Newlands must not expect to be free from the same treatment.

His proposition to sell the water sites at cost, with six per cent. interest added, is perfectly business like. One could not expect him to hold onto these sites for ever and realize nothing on his investment.

Anybody else had the same right to purchase these sites and and those who did not, have no right to find fault.

Nevada is on the eve of great improvements and if we all put our shoulders to the wheel we can do something, but we never will accomplish anything if we continually question the motives of every man who tries to improve on the present condition of things in Nevada.
